eLearning relaunched

COPE is delighted to announce the relaunch of the eLearning programme on the COPE website. COPE members can access the programme directly on the COPE website <http://publicationethics.org/resources/e-learning> once they have logged in. We hope this will greatly improve your experience, making it easier and quicker to access and progress through each module.

There are now five interactive modules, providing advice and support to editors and publishers. The five modules cover plagiarism, falsification, fabrication, authorship and conflicts of interest.

Another five modules will be introduced in due course, on editor misconduct, reviewer misconduct, redundant publication, selective reporting and unethical research.

Very best wishes
